

Command Philosophy
CAPT Greg Magee, USCG
Commander, USCG Sector San Juan

As members of Sector San Juan, we have a duty to safeguard the U.S.'s southernmost border. Regardless of your position, duties, or responsibilities, I expect the following:

- Take Charge – Take charge of the things that you are involved with and always be ready to step up and assume higher levels of responsibility on short notice.
- Plan and Prepare – The foundation of good performance is being prepared. We need to be ready personally and professionally – know the unit, our missions, the rules, and the situation.
- Communicate – Don't hoard information. Share it rapidly and accurately. Get to know people outside your unit and your workspace. Keep your families informed.
- Accept Responsibility – Admit your mistakes early, correct them, learn from them, and move on endeavoring to not repeat them. Don't sweep anything under the carpet. Your mistakes could affect the safety of your unit and your shipmates!
- Look Out for Your Shipmates and their Families – Take care of each other and your people while doing the right thing. Ensure your family is prepared for the future and potential emergencies.
- Attention to Detail – The details can make the difference between success and failure.

Our actions and conduct will be consistent with the Core Values of Honor, Respect, and Devotion to Duty. We will focus on the following lines of effort:

Build Our Team

Strengthen Partnerships

Interdict Threats

Facilitate and Safeguard Commerce

Ensure the Safety of the Boating Public
